

Dining room security door

The door was originally a standard screen door that I had converted into a security door. I went out and purchased shelf support railing (prepainted and finished in white) and mounted them with both screws and large pop rivets to the original frame. I then covered the hardware with epoxy to make it look like it was welded to the original frame. The door hardware was changed so it was lockable from both the outside and inside.